1. On 11 June 1952 work began on a new line on the "S-Bahn", the Russian-controlled Berlin municipal rail line. The new line begins at a point on the S-Bahn between Berlin-Blankenburg (N53/289) and Berlin-Karow (N53/296) and, according to plans, will lead to Oranienburg (N53/267) via Mühlenbeck (N53/286) and Birkenwerder (N53/276). It is to be a freight line. The presence of such a line will make it possible for freight traffic to completely by-pass the French sector of Berlin.

2. Approximately 12,000 sleepers were ordered from Thuringia for this project, but only 5,000 were delivered. [redacted] it was impossible to fulfill the demand for 12,000 sleepers since there were only 5,700 on hand, and these were needed for going projects.

3. Work on the new rail line is in progress, and about 80 to 100 workers are employed on the job. As of 3 July 1952, the work site was the underpass between Karow and Blankenburg through which tracks for the outer rail ring toward Lichtenberg were being laid.
